

Pluto in Aquarius

(From Ginger Chalford Metraux)

Back in 1984, my book "Pluto, Planet of Magic and Power" was published. There had not yet been any book focusing on Pluto, so it was met with a great deal of enthusiasm by the astrological community, who then referred to me as "the Pluto Lady." I saw Pluto as representing an alternative and grander perspective on all things human, and the passage of Pluto triggering transmutation, transformation, and ultimately transcendence. What this normally looks like in 3D is destruction and then regeneration. Pluto is deep, in the collective unconscious mind, and reflects all major significant social and consciousness changes/evolutions.

I wrote this book during the AIDS epidemic and read charts for several young men afflicted with the disease. It invariably was shown by Pluto transits, especially through the house of health or across the ascendant (which represents the physical body). The deep pain and suffering of these men were as if a wound in the collective was oozing, a trauma coming from lack of acceptance and love (i.e., "othering") from the mainstream, and it required tremendous transformation of self-image. The ultimate outcome from the AIDS experience was a growing acceptance of gays, a big social change. In 1984, Pluto entered Scorpio, which is a sign of the occult, the hidden being revealed, and the opportunity to learn how to love oneself.

This year, Pluto's transit takes it into Aquarius for the first time since 1777! The Revolutionary War lasted until 1783, and the new republic was initiated after that, during the transit of Pluto. Plus, the French Revolution happened during that transit as well. So, we are in for a historic world-changing ride! Uprisings and peoples' rebellions are part of the destructive and transformative nature of Pluto.

And here I will share what I wrote in my Pluto book back in 1984, anticipating the impact of Pluto through the zodiac.

"Pluto in Aquarius" Thesis: New Teachings

Scientific and social thought will be revolutionized during this transit. People will network with each other and establish common bonds between great numbers of their fellow human beings. New theoretical discoveries in science and metaphysics can inspire major social changes. New lifestyles, particularly in living arrangements, will proliferate, and people will feel connected with a larger group of people around the world than ever before. At the same time, they will have unique ways of expressing their individuality.

New dimensions of ancient knowledge will be taught, such as the uses of resonance in healing, etc. Yet change will be difficult for many of the world's people who can't utilize these new resources because they aren't prepared to accept them. There may be tendencies to want to ignore these unfortunate people by setting up more and more of a welfare type state of control.

Revolutions in large countries may create several autonomous smaller ones, in which divergent cultures and lifestyles are separated by new boundaries. Pluto's transit through Aquarius will mark a difficult and complex time for the individual, who has to sort out so many personal options. Women for example, could find their choices as unlimited as men's by this time, and may no longer feel that they are second class citizens or mere sex objects."

Note from Ginger, looking at all of this;

Remember, I wrote this before the internet! Besides predicting mass worldwide connection, I also see that healing with resonance, or as it is called now, frequency medicine has come about. The breakup of larger countries into smaller cultural enclaves is what was predicted by Marty Armstrong and David Martin, and what I think will be the ultimate solution to the Ukraine dilemma. Eastern Ukraine that identifies with Russia will become its own country. And all the white nationalists in Kyiv can have their sovereign republic too - a win-win! Yay!

Happy 2023
